

CLEARINGHOUSE FOR MILITARY FAMILY READINESS

Established in 2010 through support from the U.S. Department of Defense's Office of Military Community and Family Policy, the Clearinghouse for Military Family Readiness is engaged in numerous applied research and evaluation studies with military partners. The Clearinghouse's work has made it a go-to organization for professionals to find solutions for the concerns of military personnel, veterans, and their families.

The Clearinghouse Technical Assistance (TA) Team

Who are we? A team of implementation specialists who are here to assist professionals who work with military families in selecting, implementing, and evaluating evidence-based programs and practices to enhance family readiness.

What can the TA team do for you?

Provide information on evidence-based programs

Offer strategies to help with program implementation

Conduct rapid literature reviews related to evidence-based programs and implementation science

Help identify potential sources of funding

Help select a program that meets your specific need or focus

Develop a program evaluation plan

Deliver tools and resources to help with program selection, implementation, and evaluation

Field questions related to the Clearinghouse Continuum of Evidence

What is the Clearinghouse Continuum of Evidence (Continuum)?

The Continuum is a repository of programs that have been reviewed by Clearinghouse scientists. Programs are placed on the Continuum with descriptions of the programs and other elements, such as target audience, evidence, and components, to help individuals who serve military families make informed decisions regarding what program aligns to each family's specific and unique needs.
